W. H. CLARK QUILTS CHURCH

Former Rushville Pastor Leaves Connersville Because of Ill Health.

Special to the Daily Republican
Connersville, Ind., Jan. 26.—The Rev. W. H. Clark, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, tendered his resignation as pastor here yesterday and will leave tomorrow for Battle Creek, Mich., to recuperate. His health has been very poor for some time. He will be joined by Mrs. Clark soon. From Battle Creek the Rev. Mr. Clark expects to return to his old home at Middletown, Pa. He came here from the Rushville U. P. church four years ago and has been a very popular pastor.

TERRE HAUTE GETS BIG ENCAMPMENT

National Meeting of U. R. K. of P. Will be Held There According to General Trabue.

MAJ STOBART MAY VISIT HERE

General Samuel L. Trabue, of the staff of Major Stobart of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, received word this morning that the national encampment of the order would be held in Terre Haute, July 19, to 25. This announcement came as a surprise to General Trabue and members of the Uniform Rank here as they expected the national encampment to be held either in Detroit or Louisville. Because Terre Haute is not very far distant from this city, members of the local company have already started planning for the trip there next summer. Major Stobart of Milwaukee will be in Terre Haute soon to make final arrangements for the encampment and General Trabue will make an effort to have him visit Rushville before returning home. The encampment usually attracts 10,000 members of the order and some surprises was expressed that a city the size of Terre Haute should land the encampment.

CHURCH GOING VALUE SHOWN

The Rev. A. D. Batchelor Preaches Sermon in View of Special Day Next Sunday.

DEVELOPMENT OF OBSERVANCE

Pastor Recalls How Suddenly Has Come to be a Day For Church Going.

LAST NIGHT AT ST. PAUL M. E. CHURCH

Rev. A. D. Batchelor preached a special sermon in view of "church attendance day" which will be observed next Sunday. His subject was, "Why Attend Church?" The text was Heb. 10:23-4, "Let us hold fast the confession of our hope that it waver not—and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; not forsaking our own assembling together, as the custom of some is, but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as you see the day drawing nigh."

He said in part: "From the beginning of Christianity has been an organized social force. It has held together by the social and public communion of its parts. An isolated Christian is unknown in the New Testament. In the New Testament the men who did the work of God were in the church and labored in the name of the church."

The passage before us was written when Roman emperors forbade Christians to congregate. By this they hoped to crush the new religion. They knew if they could break up the Christian assembly Christianity would die in its youth. But Christians ignored the edicts and met in the catacombs and other secret places. This enabled the church to survive.

"Let a single generation grow up without a church-going habit and the safety of our streets, the sanctity of our laws, and the security of our free institutions will be greatly imperiled. The question is, do we want to keep Christianity alive upon earth?

"The first reason given in the text why we should attend church is to hold fast the confession of our hope that it waver not." In Roman days some wavered because they met at the peril of their lives. They also had to meet at a sacrifice of their business. The Lord's Day had not yet been sanctioned by law. To meet on this day meant a disturbance of business, and a loss of profits. But these reasons obtain no longer.

"But the fact remains that unless we frequent the place of assembling, our faith is apt to waver. Otherwise we miss the instruction and inspiration which are helpful to faith. Moreover our attendance is a 'confession' which strengthens faith. It is an open acknowledgement which cannot fail to have its influence over us as well as over those about us."

"The second reason given is to provoke unto love and good works." The church assembly makes for good. It not only binds Christian people by the bond of love, but also stimulates them to virtuous works. The man heart and conscience are stimulated once every week by the plain and direct gospel cannot fail to be a better man than he would be without this.

"In his famous letter to Trajan, Pliny wrote, that the Christians assembled to bind themselves to an oath, not to the commissions of any wickedness, not to be guilty of theft, or robbery, or adultery, never to falsify their word." As the Christian assembly then made for virtue, so it has ever since by its emphasis upon pure and holy things.

The Christian assembly makes for

DEVELOP THE HOME INDUSTRY

Owen A. Charles Says Duty Lies There First and Then to Encouragement of New Ones.

VALUE OF BEGINNING HERE

Some of the Possibilities Open to American Communities and Their Realization Are Shown.

LAST NIGHT AT ST. PAUL M. E. CHURCH

(By Owen A. Charles.) Sentiment is practically unanimous that it would be a good thing to bring to Rushville new industries, particularly those coming under the general head of manufacturing. The mention of that word alone, conjures up visions of imposing factory buildings, streams of operatives going to and from work, new dwellings, enlarged stores, busy streets and what not, until local merchants and holders of real estate are almost or quite persuaded to give up cash for bonuses, provide free building sites, secure the remission of taxes for a period or do anything else within reason to make these visions realities.

But what then? Is there usually an intelligent plan considered for getting at the classes of industry that will not only be of benefit to the community but are certain to have a good opportunity for development? Are the subjects of raw material, transportation, markets, etc., carefully gone into? Does the matter of competition from similar plants have any weight in the discussion? Is it certain that skilled labor can be provided? Are the various other elements of success or failure balanced and compared? In most cases, I am afraid not.

The ordinary procedure is painful in its simplicity, in its unvarying character. The principal idea, whether conscious or unconscious, usually has been to steal the plants already established in other places, selecting those that can be pried loose and carted away. Then the communities elsewhere; and the plundering goes on in endless succession.

Sometimes these changes are beneficial to the industries concerned. A factory that has been struggling along under adverse conditions may, in a new location, find just the stimulus

BIG FOUR WOULD ABSORB 3 ROADS

Files Petition With Public Service Commission Asking Permission to Take Over Branches.

LOCAL DIVISION INCLUDED

(By United Press.)
Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 26.—The Big Four railway today filed a petition with the Public Service Commission of Indiana asking authority to absorb three small roads in Indiana, the stock of which is controlled by the Big Four. The roads are the Fairland, Franklin and Martinsville, the Cincinnati and Southern Ohio River and the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan. The first embraces 37.84 miles in Shelby and Morgan counties. The second is 3.9 miles, from Lawrenceburg to Aurora, in Dearborn county. The third is 203.78 miles and has a capital stock of more than $2,000,000. It extends from Rushville to St. Joseph, Mich.

The commission has set no time for hearing the petition.

The petition stated that the "sale and conveyance of the three roads will promote economies in operation and will be for the best interest of the public."

PLEADED GUILTY.

DO WANT ADS. BRING RESULTS? HUH!
ASK MRS. ESTELLE SMITH AND FIND OUT

They Work While You Sleep or Whether You Are Awake or Asleep

—Here's an Example.

BUT JINX SPOILED CHANCES

Do want ads bring results? Huh! This shall now be classed in the category of useless questions.

Skeptical, aye? Ask Mrs. Estelle Smith.

She inserted a paragraph in the want ad column last week when the Daily Republican published them free. "Work wanted," said Mrs. Smith's ad. "Neat, industrious woman will do any kind of housework by day or week. Second hand clothing of all kinds wanted."

This is a sad, sad story, though. Mrs. Smith had four calls to come and get old clothing and nine opportunities to work before she could get her breath, as a result of the ad.

But ain't all this tough when the

DEAD BODIES REMOVED TODAY

Rescue Workers Expect to Find More in Wreckage at Jackson, Mich., Where Trains Collided.

SEVERAL ARE STILL MISSING

Mangled Body of Engineer Johnson Found in Upright Position—Doctors Work Valiantly.

BULLETIN.

(By United Press.)
Jackson, Mich., Jan. 26.—With the clearing away of the wreckage and the resumption of traffic this afternoon, it was clearly established that only four persons died. Coroner's inquest will be Saturday.

BULLETIN.

(By United Press.)
Jackson, Mich., Jan. 26.—Four dead bodies were removed today from the wreckage of the Michigan Central passenger train which met head-on with a freight here last night. Rescue workers continued throughout the day to search for more bodies as several are missing. A dozen passengers were seriously injured and several now in local hospitals are believed to be dying.

The known dead are:

Engineer Johnson, of the passenger.

S. W. Cochran, of Lansing, Mich. Thomas Scroogie, of Owasso, Mich. L. V. Beck, of Lansing, Mich.

Doctors worked valiantly, tearing the wreckage away and administering a hypodermic to many who were screaming with pain. The railroad company stated the passenger train had the right of way, but the freight trainmen said their instructions were to move out of Jackson without delay.

Engineer Johnson's body was found fearfully mangled and standing upright. Apparently he had been caught as he was about to pump.

FALSE ALARM.

The fire department was called to box 43, corner of Seventh and Morgan streets Sunday morning at three-thirty o'clock. It proved to be a false alarm. The door of the box was found open.

jinx was hanging around Mrs. Smith's back door. She took sick and couldn't take advantage of one of these opportunities, not a one. But those want ads, they work whether you are sick or well, asleep or awake.

The free want ad week staged by the Republican last week was a glorious success. Phone calls have been received telling of the results obtained. Any others who found the want ads helpful are asked to write or telephone the Republican and relate their experience.

James West took a chance on the free week and sold twenty-five double cords of wood. "Thanks for the publication," writes Mr. West.

E. A. Matney, living a mile and a half northeast of New Salem, telephoned this morning that a want ad last week sold a set of harness for him.

Most of the merchants took advantage of the offer to advertise some staple article and found business surprisingly increased in the line advertised.

Miss Ruth Carr in Cast of Farce at Oxford College.

The Juniors of Western College, Oxford, Ohio, entertained the students and faculty with a delightful farce, "The Burglar," Saturday evening. The cast was taken by Miss Ruth Carr, of near New Salem, Miss Margaret Gable and Miss Marion Fulton, of Wooster, Ohio, Miss Helen Record, of Tucson, Ariz., and Miss Catherine Sutherland, of St. Louis, Mo. Miss Carr took the part of Miss Edith Brent.

TELLS STORY OF CONTEST CLOSING

The Lookout Sunday Contains Pictures of Christian Bible School and Century Class.

PAYS COMPLIMENT TO SCHOOL

The Lookout, a Christian church publication issued at Cincinnati, O., which was distributed at the Main Street Christian Bible school Sunday, contains on the cover a picture of the Century Bible class of the local school on the inside extending across two pages a picture of the school the last Sunday of the contest with the school at Winchester, Kentucky, which was won by Rushville. On that day the attendance here was 1,588 and the collection $832.

Each picture is explained fully and under the picture of the Century Bible class is one of the finest classes of men in America, a group of enthusiastic and interested boosters. The teacher, Attorney B. F. Miller, is a capable and consecrated Christian man and a real leader. On rally day, Nov. 2, 1913, there were 255 men present. These brought an offering of $336. Where is this class at work? Why, in the Christian Sunday school of Rushville, Ind. Carl Webb is the president of the class; Joe Clark is the secretary; C. M. Yocom is the minister of the church."

OUR WOMEN CUSTOMERS

As a rule women are more careful than men in handling their money. The thrifty spirit shown by the women of Rush county is reflected by the large number of accounts maintained by them with this strong bank.

More and more farmers' wives are beginning to appreciate the advantage of a bank account, how they may have protection for money absolutely without cost and thereby free themselves from the personal danger connected with keeping their savings at home. We invite household accounts.

HELD ON FORGERY CHARGE

Elkhart Man Indicted as Result of Trading Stamp War.

Elkhart, Ind., Jan. 26.—Charged with defrauding local merchants of several hundred dollars through the operation of a fraudulent trading stamp scheme, John Godfrey, a well-known coal dealer, is under arrest on a warrant issued as the result of eight indictments returned by the grand jury. Five of the counts were for forgery and three for pretense.

Summonses on three additional indictments against the Sanders Coal company, a corporation, were served on Godfrey, who is president. He is the only known officer. L. E. Ensing, his partner, who was candidate for city treasurer on the Republican ticket in the last campaign, severed his connections with the company about a week ago and left the city, presumably to go to Seattle, Wash.

The prosecution of Godfrey is backed by the Elkhart Mercantile association, which operates a blue trading stamp concern in competition with a green stamp company headed by Godfrey. It is alleged that Godfrey was a tool of men higher up and that he saw a chance for easy money, while the blue stamp company was to be the loser. It is said that he procured a plate in Chicago and stamps from these plates were distributed promiscuously. He gave bond for $4,000.

SHE PLEADS SELF DEFENSE

Henryville Woman Says She Shot Husband to Save Herself.

Henryville, Ind., Jan. 26.—Henry Heyn, fifty-seven years old, a carpenter living west of Henryville, was shot and killed by his wife. It is alleged that Heyn had been on a protracted spree and came home and demanded the weapon, but his wife refused to produce it. Because of her husband's threats to kill the family, Mrs. Heyn declares, she fired the fatal shot.

WIDOWER SHOOTS WOMAN

Met on Bridge and Then Refused to Speak to Him.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., Jan. 26.—Mrs. Walter Cowgill, thirty years old, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded by Alex Jeffries, forty years old, a widower, when the two met at the railroad bridge near Savah, west of here. It is alleged the two had some trouble, and when the woman refused to speak Jeffries shot her with a revolver, the bullet entering just below the heart.

After shooting Mrs. Cowgill Jeffries placed her in his buggy, drove to a nearby farmhouse and called a physician. He was later arrested and is now in the county jail. The woman is not expected to recover.

Aged Woman Shoots Negro.

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 26.—Mrs. M. C. Laughead, an aged widow, shot and dangerously wounded Charles Boyd, colored, as the man was entering a window at her home. The man was taken to a hospital, where it was said his wounds probably would prove fatal. Mrs. Laughead, who is well to do, said her home had been robbed recently of small articles.

Young Grimes Was Acquitted.

Madison, Ind., Jan. 26.—In the case of Harold Grimes, eighteen years old, indicted and tried for first degree murder for shooting his father, William Grimes, last August, the jury, after being out an hour, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Scores Enter Into Plan for Stumping

St. Paul in June.

(By United Press.)

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 26.—At a meeting of the Citizen's Nonpartisan League here today, a score of club women entered enthusiastically into plans for stumping the city in the municipal campaign next June. Although women have not been tendered the vote of this state, they are taking a keen interest in St. Paul's new charter which went into effect Jan. 1. The women have been busy for months making a close study of the various provisions of the charter and all expect to take the stump for various candidates, pass out literature and help in other ways.

The Daily Republican

The "Old Reliable" Republican News paper of Rush County.

Published Daily except Sunday by THE REPUBLICAN COMPANY. Office: Northwest Corner of Second and Perkins Streets, RUSHVILLE, INDIANA.

Entered at the Rushville, Ind., Post office as Second-class Matter.

TELEPHONE NUMBER, 1111.

Monday, January 26, 1914.

Of Friend of Mr. Beveridge.

Our old friend, Albert J. Beveridge, is still wasting his time bearing false tales against the Republican party, his friend in adversity, which, when it thought evidently that he had been at the public trough long enough, did not elect him to office again. This time he has chosen for the vehicle of his falsehoods Collier's Weekly, the king of muckrakers, and the Indianapolis Star, which Sunday printed in advance the article Collier's will print this week.

If Mr. Beveridge's opinions could be taken seriously and honestly, they might be worthy of consideration, but since all Republicans know his attitude toward the Republican party, that of open and unfair hostility, no harm can come from his declarations.

The premise of Mr. Beveridge's dissertation is that the Republican party is the only one in history which is afraid of itself, but he devoted very few lines to the explanation of this startling assertion. Rather he devotes the good space of the Indianapolis Star explaining why the Progressive party will exist and the Republican party will die. If it is a foregone and prearranged conclusion in Mr. Beveridge's mind that the Progressive party is to keep the breath of life, what's the use of all this prattle?

But to the intent of the article: It is presumed Mr. Beveridge means the Republican party is afraid of itself because it would not call a special convention. Rather the Republican committee selected a plan which is much more expressive of the will of the rank and file. The party adopted the changes suggested even by the enemies of the party and they will become party law when they are ratified by the state conventions. Under this scheme approximately forty times as many men will have opportunity to express their opinions on the questions.

KNIGHTS OF ROAD GATHER

Cleveland, O., Jan. 26 — Knights of the Road, Gentlemen of Leisure, Weary Waggles and Dusty Dans to the number of some scores are gathering here today. They are to open their convention, the Conference of the National Brotherhood Welfare Association, tomorrow under the leadership of the "millionaire hobo", Dr. James Eads Howe. towns thus despoiled set out to rob bus that its owner needs. Where this can be accomplished, the removal is justified; and its promoters, if acting intelligently on that idea, developing Home Industries and Encouraging new ones deserve due credit.

But, how much good is actually accomplished by merely shifting factories about where there are no sound economic reasons for the change. The question is one that answers itself. Yet the great majority of community booster apparently give it little or no thought.

Moreover, what value can be placed on an industrial enterprise that will change its location in response merely to special inducements? Does the substantial, profitable firm or company ordinarily want to do so?

To secure such there must be some good reason for the change—better sources of supply, more favorable labor conditions, easier access to markets, etc. The conspicuous industrial successes of the country were, however, located where they now are, because the conditions there called them forth. Their main works have remained in or near the original sites, and their development has taken place simultaneously with that of the communities which gave them birth. The best prophesies of future possibilities are these examples of the past.

They teach us for one thing, that, in the effort to foster industries, the plants already existing in or adjacent to the town should have consideration.

Are they doing a business equal to the demand for their products? Can that demand be extended by proper advertising and salesmanship? Have they enough capital available, or could further investments in them be made on a sound, conservative basis? Have they the access to markets that is justified by their geographical location? Are the freight rates fair, or is there discrimination in favor of similar plants in other districts? Could any of the by products be exploited to better advantage? Is there any profit to make from what has heretofore been considered waste? Would a higher grade of product yield to higher net returns? Are the local manufacturing processes efficient? Would it pay to install more modern machinery? Is the power for them being economically generated and applied? What can local enterprise and capital do to aid in their development? These are specimens of the catechism that every community possessing the proper organization, ought to put itself through at this time, whether apparently prospering or not.

Then while fostering home industries, the actively interested men of the place can begin to look around for opportunities of establishing new, either with their own or outside capital. It will amaze the average American to learn, when brought into realization of the facts, how wide is the range of possibilities. Despite the enormous development of manufacturing in this country within the last few decades the increased demands of civilization and the practical utilization of scientific research have so extended the field of industrial activity that the progress of the nineteenth century hardly can be more than a tithe of what is immediately impending. In common, raw material lying all about us, in the products of our fields and forests, in the forces of nature and even in the atmosphere (as infinite production) There are opportunities for industrial development heretofore unknown—frequently undreamed of.

Now what will you do in the town to utilize these opportunities for industrial development? Will you continue in the same old obsolete way or will you try the more modern and generally accepted way?

To develop industries that are already here and to encourage new ones and to do it in a way that will really be beneficial to the city requires organization. Not merely organization in name but an organization in fact. Call it what you will, Commercial Club, Chamber of Commerce, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, in fact, the name

STATE IS IN NEED OF WOMEN

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Jan. 26.—"Between 2,000 and 3,000 girls from Indiana graduate each year at the American colleges and the majority go home to play cards and attend literary clubs and luncheons in order to keep their faculties alive."

This is an argument for woman suffrage contained in suggestions to speakers made by the Woman's Franchise League of America.

"Why not take advantage of the intelligence, ability and training of these young women?" asks the suffragist.

"Indiana needs her women, for she has plenty of conditions to remedy before she can fold her hands and put on her holiday attire," continues the argument. "Indiana has 33 juvenile delinquents out of each 100,000. The average for the country is 28."

"Indiana has 118 paupers out of 100,000. The average for the country is but 101. Illinois, with a city as big as Chicago, has less pauperism than Indiana."

Indiana has 66,213 illiterates, and spends but 39 cents out of each $100.00 she owns on the education of her children, while Oklahoma spends 75 cents.

"No state has as high genuine percentage of divorce suits as Indiana. Only the states which, with their easy divorce laws attract strangers, can compete. The average for United States is 73; for Indiana it is 142 out of 100,000."

The quarterly conference of the St. Paul M. E. church will be held at the church tomorrow evening at seven-thirty o'clock, with the Rev. V. W. Tevis of this city, district superintendent, presiding.

WILL PAY DEATH PENALTY FEB. 20

Electrocution of Steve Chirka and Harry Rasico Will Be First in History of State.

CHAIR IS BEING INSTALLED

No Newspaper Men Will Witness Execution and Prison Doctors Will Establish Death.

(By United Press.)

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 26.—Steve Chirka, of Gary, and Harry Rasico of Vincennes killed their wives. Chirka thought his wife was unfaithful. Rasico was maddened because she visited relatives in Terre Haute against his order and for good measure he also blew out the brains of his little child in the mother's arms.

A jury and a judge declared each man guilty of murder. Each man was sentenced to be killed. When the state of Indiana kills these uneducated wife-murderers the legal killing will be done in secret. Some time after midnight early on February 20 the two men will be electrocuted.

As the electricity is shot through these men only a few prison officials will see the bodies of the electrocuted men strain at the straps which tie them, one man at a time, in the electric chair. No newspaper men or other outsiders will see the blue flame quiver and burn the flesh. Only prison doctors will establish that the men are dead. The bodies will be placed immediately in coffins and disposed of as the families of the dead men wish.

The prison officials will carefully check up their watches which they held to time the killings. When the newspapermen waiting in the warden's office are given the time of throwing on the current and the elapsed time before the doctors pronounced the men dead and when also the number of shocks given are announced, the prison officials today hope to be able to say that the executions were "successful."

As the electrocutions will be the first in Indiana's penal history the officials do not want any unpleasant features, because hanging, the old method has been uniformly "successful" in the big state's prison here.

Former deputy warden M. M. Barnard, now living in Indianapolis, believes that the rope is more humane than the electric chair.

Barnard also believes that no warden relishes the job of killing a man as part of the warden's duty. He witnessed eleven hangings performed by Warden J. D. Reid, now in his grave, who executed here in all thirteen prisoners.

"I recall one night," said Barnard, "when Reid completely gave way after an execution. He came straight from the scaffold into the prison office. We were alone. He sat down at a desk, dropped his head and sobbed as if his heart were breaking."

Many friends of the dead warden believed Reid's death was hastened by sorrow over the legal killings he performed.

E. J. Fogarty, present warden of the prison, is known to be averse to the electrocutions but he says he will do his duty. To escape a feeling of responsibility for killing a human being, Fogarty may take advantage of a suggestion made by George A. H. Shideler of Marion, a former warden of the prison. Shideler would have several men throw on simultaneously the current and each man would not be certain it was he who killed. The installation of the new electric chairs and the reprise of the two men for five weeks by Governor Ralston have centered Fogarty's mind on the coming executions and he is not fond of discussing them.

The condemned men are finding consolation in religion. According to Barnard most men have gone to their doom on prison scaffolds composed to death, believing their sin-stained souls purged by the grace of God.

Vantine made a movement of impatience.

"Tell them," he said, "that I positively refuse to see them or to allow my servants to see them. Let them get their information from the police."

"Very well, sir," said Parks and turned away, grinning.

Vantine passed on through the anteroom in which we had found the body of the unfortunate Frenchman and into the room beyond. Five or six pieces of furniture, evidently just unpacked, stood there; but, ignorant as I am of such things, he did not have to point out to me the Boule cabinet.

I looked at it for some moments, for it was certainly a beautiful piece of work, with a wealth of inlay and incrustation little short of marvelous. But I may as well say here that I never really appreciated it. The florid style of the fourteenth and fifteenth Louis is not at all to my taste. I am afraid that Vantine found me a little cold.

"You don't seem to care for it," he said, looking at me.

"That's my fault and not the fault of the cabinet," I pointed out. "I'm not educated up to it. I'm too little of an artist perhaps."

He was flushed, as a man might be should another make a disparaging remark about his wife, and he led the way from the room at once.

"Remember, Lester," he said a little sternly, pausing with his hand on the front door, "there is to be no foolishness about securing that cabinet for me. Don't you let it get away. I'm in deadly earnest. Let me know as soon as you have any news."

Was Vantine quite normal? I wondered on my way home. Could any man be normal who was willing to pay $100,000 for a piece of furniture, especially a man who could not afford such extravagance? I knew the size of Vantine's fortune. It was large, but $100,000 represented more than a year's income. And then I smiled to myself. Of course Vantine was merely jesting when he named that limit. The cabinet could be bought for a tenth of it at the most.

It was about 8 o'clock that evening that Godfrey tapped at my door, and when I let him in I could tell by the way his eyes were shining that he had some news.

"I can't stay long," he said. "I've got to get down to the office and put the finishing touches on that story." But nevertheless he took the cigar I proffered him and sank into the chair opposite my own.

"Ah!" agreed Godfrey. "That's it! How was it done? I told you it was a pretty case, Lester. But wait till we hear from Paris."

"That reminds me," I said, sitting up suddenly. "I've got to cable to Paris myself, on some business for Mr. Vantine."

"Not connected with this affair?"

"Oh, no; his shippers over there sent him a piece of furniture that doesn't belong to him. He asked me to straighten the matter out."

I rang for the hallboy, asked for a cable blank and sent off a message to Armand & Son, telling them of the mistake and asking them to cable the name of the owner of the cabinet now in Mr. Vantine's possession. Godfrey got to his feet.

"I must be moving along," he said. "There's no use sitting here theorizing until we have some sort of foundation to build on."

The ringing of my telephone stopped him.

"Hello," I said, taking down the receiver.

"Is that you, Mr. Lester?" asked a voice.

"Yes."

"This is Parks," and I suddenly realized that his voice was unfamiliar because it was hoarse and quivering with emotion. "Could you come down to the house right away, sir?"

"Why, yes," I said, wonderingly. "If it's important. Does Mr. Vantine need me?"

"We all need you!" said the voice and broke into a dry sob. "For God's sake, come quick. Mr. Lester!"

"All right," I said without further parley, for evidently he had lost his self control. "Something has happened down at Vantine's," I added to Godfrey as I hung up the receiver.

"Shall I come, too?" asked Godfrey. "Perhaps you'd better. It sounded pretty serious."

We went down together in the elevator, and three minutes later we had hailed a taxi and were speeding eastward toward the avenue. As we reached the avenue and turned downtown the driver pushed up his spark. Five minutes later we drew up before the Vantine place.

Parks must have been on the front steps looking for me, for he came running down them almost before the car had stopped. His face startled me.

"Is it you, Mr. Lester?" he gasped.

"Steady, man," I said. "Don't let yourself go to pieces. Now—what has happened?"

"I'll show you, sir," he said and ran up the steps, along the hall, to the door of the anteroom where we had found the Frenchman's body. "In there, sir!" he sobbed. "In there!"

The room was ablaze with light, and for an instant my eyes were so dazzled that I could distinguish nothing. Dimly I saw Godfrey spring forward and drop to his knees.

Then my eyes cleared, and I saw, on the very spot where D'Aurelle had died, another body. I remember bending over and peering into the face.

It was the face of Philip Vantine.

"He's dead," said Godfrey. "Then there was an instant's silence. "Lester, look here!" cried Godfrey's voice, sharp, insistent.

Godfrey was kneeling there holding something toward me.

"Look here!" he cried again.

It was the dead man's hand he was holding—the right hand, a swollen and discolored hand—and on the back of it, just above the knuckles, were two tiny wounds, from which a few drops of blood had trickled.

And as I stared at this ghastly sight, scarcely able to believe my eyes, I heard a choking voice behind me saying over and over again:

"It was that woman done it! It was that woman done it!"

I have no very clear remembrance of what happened after that. The shock was so great that I had just strength enough to totter to a chair and drop into it and sit there staring vaguely at that dark splotch on the carpet. Two or three persons came into the room—Parks and the other servants, I suppose. I heard Godfrey's voice giving orders, and finally some one held a glass to my lips and commanded me to drink. Again, then, I saw Godfrey standing over me.

"Feel better?" he asked.

I nodded. "I don't wonder it knocked you out," he went on. "I'm feeling shaky myself. I had them call Vantine's physician. But he can't do anything."

"Godfrey," I whispered, "whose voice was it—something about a woman?"

"It was Rogers. He's almost hysterical. We'll get the story as soon as he quiet down."

Some one called him from the door, and he turned away, leaving me staring blankly at nothing. So there had been a woman in Vantine's life! Perhaps

"Why not?" I demanded.

"Because it is evident that that isn't his name."

"Go ahead and tell me, Godfrey," I said, as he looked at me, smiling. "I don't see it."

"Why, it's plain enough. He had five cards in his pocket, no two alike. The sixth, selected probably at random, he had sent up to Vantine."

I saw it then, of course. Godfrey smiled again at my expression.

"The real d'Aurelle, whoever he may turn out to be, may be able to help us," he added. "If he can't, we may learn something from the Paris police. The dead man's Bertillon measurements have been cabled over to them. Even that won't help, if he has never been arrested. And, of course, we can't get at motives until we find out something about him."

"But, Godfrey," I said, "how was it done? That is what stumps me. How was it done?"

"Ah!" agreed Godfrey. "That's it!

How was it done? I told you it was a pretty case, Lester. But wait till we hear from Paris."

"That reminds me," I said, sitting up suddenly. "I've got to cable to Paris myself, on some business for Mr. Vantine."

"Not connected with this affair?"

"Oh, no; his shippers over there sent him a piece of furniture that doesn't belong to him. He asked me to straighten the matter out."

"Is that you, Mr. Lester?" asked a voice.

"Yes."

"This is Parks," and I suddenly realized that his voice was unfamiliar because it was hoarse and quivering with emotion. "Could you come down to the house right away, sir?"

"Why, yes," I said, wonderingly. "If it's important. Does Mr. Vantine need me?"

"We all need you!" said the voice and broke into a dry sob. "For God's sake, come quick. Mr. Lester!"

"All right," I said without further parley, for evidently he had lost his self control. "Something has happened down at Vantine's," I added to Godfrey as I hung up the receiver.

"Then what was it?"

"Oh, no. Snake poison wouldn't kill a man that quickly, not even a fer-de-lance. That fellow practically dropped where he was struck."

"Why, yes," I said, wonderingly. "If it's important. Does Mr. Vantine need me?"

"We all need you!" said the voice and broke into a dry sob. "For God's sake, come quick. Mr. Lester!"

"All right," I said without further parley, for evidently he had lost his self control. "Something has happened down at Vantine's," I added to Godfrey as I hung up the receiver.

Hughes listened with incredulous face.

"But it's absurd, you know," he protested, when Godfrey had finished. "Things like this don't happen here in New York. In Florence, perhaps, in the middle ages; but not here in the twentieth century!"

"I can scarcely believe my own senses," Godfrey agreed. "But I saw the Frenchman lying here this afternoon; and now here's Vantine."

Hughes turned back to the body again, and looked long and earnestly at the injured hand.

"What sort of instrument made this wound, would you say, Mr. Godfrey?" he questioned at last.

"A sharp instrument with two prongs. My theory is that the prongs are hollow, like a hypodermic needle, and leave a drop or two of poison at the bottom of the wound. You see, a vein has been cut."

"Yes," Hughes assented. "It would scarcely be possible to pierce the hand here without striking a vein. One of the prongs would be sure to do it."

"That's the reason there are two of them, I fancy."

"But you are, of course, aware that no poison exists which would act so quickly?" Hughes inquired.

Godfrey looked at him strangely.

"You yourself mentioned Florence a moment ago," he said. "You meant, I suppose, that such a poison did at one time exist there?"

"Something of the sort, perhaps," agreed Hughes.

To be continued.

The local team was decidedly off form besides being handicapped by the low ceiling of the Connersville gym. The Rushville team made only one field goal during the entire game, the other eight points coming from foul goals. Farthing made the only field goal. A large crowd accompanied the team and because of the big victory over the Carthage on the night before it was thought that the team had found itself and would make Connersville play to win.

State in Runyan-Stull Trial at Crawfordsville Ordered to Give up Testimony.

TAKEN AT CORONER'S INQUEST

(By United Press.)

Crawfordsville, Ind., Jan. 26.—The defense in the trial of Walter Runyan for killing Arlie Stull won an important victory here today when Judge Vinton ordered Coroner Howard to furnish the defendant's counsel with a copy of the testimony at the coroner's inquest. This means the defendant will have the benefit of a large amount of evidence now in the hands of the state.

The story of Runyan's flirtation with his cousin, Miss Roxie Hart, was continued from the lips of witnesses today. The state counsel contends Runyan killed Stull to hide from church and political circles his affair with his cousin.

According to word just received here, two of the eleven boys who attended the Farmers' Short Course at Purdue university week before last as the guests of the Peoples Loan &amp; Trust Company, in whose corn contest they won the prizes for each township, won third in the corn judging contest in which a hundred boys from all parts of the state engaged.

Lytle Power, son of Mrs. Jennie Power of Anderson township, and Worth Pitts, son of Mr. and Mrs. &amp; William F. Pitts of Ripley township each received 88 per cent. Only three other boys in Indiana excelled them.

This considered very fine for the Rush county boys, when it is remembered that they received their first instruction in judging corn after they reached Purdue, while a number of the boys in the contest had done such work before.
